Forty-Seven Unions Ballot On Employers' Right To Regulate Overtime

LONDON, March 19.—The Engineering and Shipbuilding Trades Federation, the National Union of Foundry Workers and the Federation of General Workers have issued a manifesto regarding the lockout of engineers stating there is no record of a lockout and their representatives have been treated with greater harshness and provocation by employers, and charging that employers are trying to embroil members of other organizations in the quarrel.

Forty seven other Allied Unions are now balloting on the question. Prince Appreciates India's Difficulties

Has Full Confidence In Outcome.

LONDON, March 20.—On the eve of the departure of the Prince of Wales from India, Lloyd George sent him a telegram assuring him of the admiration with which the British people had watched stage by stage his journey. The message said, "you have inherited from the King and Emperor the royal power of his house not only to command allegiance but to inspire devotion in his subjects." In reply the Prince expresses his regret at leaving India and observes that he had gained at first hand some knowledge of India's ideals and aspirations and also some appreciation of her difficulties. The Prince adds, "I am filled with admiration for both British and Indians who are entrusted with the responsible task of governing India and who are striving for that co-operation and goodwill which alone can assure India's well-being. I leave India with all confidence that she will do full justice to the opportunities before her."

Her Reward OR Love's Recompense

CHAPTER XL

The Union of Hearts.

"I have felt from the first that there was good blood in his veins. It has always seemed to me that he could not have sprung from any ordinary source," Mrs. Campbell remarked, when talking these things over quietly with Audrey afterward.

"That has been my own feeling, too," returned Miss Waldemar, "but it seems very wonderful to me that Arthur's boy, of all others, should have been committed to my care."

"The whole affair, from beginning to end, is the most romantic story I ever heard of in real life; and," with an arch glance at Audrey, "I never saw such a change in any one as there has been in Mr. Halstead, since our first meeting."

Audrey blushed. She knew there had been a change in her also. Some thing of the beauty and hope of her early life had returned to her, as well as to him, and had shed a very different light upon their future, thus leaving its impress upon their faces.

Arthur Halstead was no longer the sad, self-repressed man which he had been for twenty years and more. The shadows of disappointment and grief had all been swept out of his countenance, leaving it genial and beaming as in the days of his early hopes; while there had come an energy and buoyancy in his manner that had long been foreign to it.

Audrey's lassitude and paleness all fled before the dawn of this new day, and she seemed to grow young with a beauty at which her friends all marveled. The score or more of years that had elapsed since her separation from her lover had touched her very lightly, despite the sorrow of which she had been ever conscious, and now, at forty-two, with the future still holding so much of hope for her, she did not seem a day over thirty.

"Mamma, I am not sure but Miss Waldemar will make a lovelier bride than Annie," Grace Campbell remarked only a day or two before the wedding.

It had been decided that there should be two weddings instead of one.

Audrey had told Arthur Halstead that she would become his wife when ever he pleased, and he was unwilling to wait for the fulfillment of his happiness a day longer than was necessary; so it had been arranged that after Rich and Annie should have plighted the vows which would make them one, Mr. Halstead and Miss Waldemar should also be married, without any show or ostentation.

There was no reason why they should delay; it would save the labor and excitement for another wedding.

Rich and Annie were to make a trip to the White Mountains and thence to Saratoga, where they intended to spend a couple of weeks; so it would be a month before their return. Meanwhile Mr. and Mrs. Halstead, senior, would repair directly to New York to await the homecoming of the young couple.

The evening of the ninth arrived, and everything was in readiness for the all-important event of the morrow. Miss Starkey was tired, but happy, for all things had moved along so smoothly as any one could have any right to expect, and the old homestead was in perfect order—swept and garnished from attic to cellar, no pains or expense having been spared to "have things done up in shape."

"Audrey, my own," Arthur Halstead said, as he parted from the beautiful woman, who was to be his wife on the morrow, for the last time. "I can hardly realize this great happiness, but it almost makes me forget all those lost years of my life."

She lifted her lovely face to him, and it seemed as if it shone with almost holy beauty.

"Do not let us call them 'lost years,' Arthur," she said, "for I do not believe they have been, even though they have held so much of pain for both of us. You have faithfully fulfilled the duties which seemed to be laid upon you in such an unaccountable way, and no one can do that without having both heart and character ennobled and purified. While surely I cannot feel that the years were 'lost' which have brought so much of comfort to me in watching and helping to forward the development of such a boy as Rich has been."

"No, indeed; the influence of your work no one can estimate," returned Arthur, almost reverently.

"And the knowledge," continued Audrey, with a tender smile, "when it came to me, that Rich was your son—that though we had been so strangely separated, I had been working for you all these years, was my crowning joy—my recompense—as I told you the other day. Oh, no, they have not been 'lost years,' Arthur; they have only been a sort of sowing and growing time, and now we are about to reap a beautiful harvest, and shall, I believe, realize and appreciate our happiness far more than we should have done if we had had everything our own way in those old days."

"Perhaps you are right, Audrey," Mr. Halstead said, gravely, yet the pain of the past had been so great that he could not look back upon it even now with regret.

She glanced up at him wistfully.

Indoor Life

Spending more time indoors makes women far more subject to constipation than men.

The liver becomes sluggish and torpid, the bowels constipated and the system poisoned by impurities.

If you would get away from the myriads of ills which result from constipation, it is only necessary to use Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

The benefits from their use are as lasting as they are prompt and certain.

Mrs. John Barry, 18 St. Amable Street, Quebec, Que., writes:

"This is to certify that I was troubled for years with constipation and tried all kinds of medicines without relief. At last my husband suggested that I try Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I did so, and must say that they have given me more relief than all the medicines I have taken during the last fifteen years. I may also add that I have used Dr. Chase's Ointment for piles with excellent results."

The Lure of Gold Or The Heart Of A Woman

PROLOGUE.

Over The Bar.

The scene would have served as a "set" for a modern melodrama. The sun had sunk in regal splendor, and there was still a faint glow in the summer sky. In the background, almost hidden by noble trees, was the Elizabethan manor called the Grange, which dominated the little Sussex village of Wrenstead. In the foreground was one of those encampments which appear magical to the mind of youth, especially when it vegetates in the countryside; there were the familiar tents, the gayly painted caravans, and the string of horses, which would perform such wonderful feats when the circus was set up and the ring made. The encampment was not only that of a circus, but of a traveling theatrical company; and on lines stretched between the trees hung, fresh from the wash-tub, portions of the theatrical wardrobe: the white dress of Ophelia, the trunks of Romeo, the toga of Julius Caesar.

On these mystic forms and colors, the flickering light of a fire, luridly gleams. Beside the fire, John Wynter the proprietor of the circus and theatre stood looking into the glowing embers and occasionally reading a log or a branch. He would have been a tall man, but a cruel injury, done years ago, had bent the once straight back and twisted the once graceful figure. There was still beauty in the face, notwithstanding its sternness; there was a touch of genius in the eyes. For this man, to whom Fate had been so unkind, was singularly gifted; he could play all the parts in the theatre, excepting that of the handsome lover; it was his brain which directed the fortunes of the traveling troupe; it was his ready wit which turned aside the difficulties in the way, or surmounted them.

All the preparations were steadily making for the night's performance and John Wynter was free to indulge in one of those reveries to which he was so much given. It was always backward that his mind traveled, back to the day when he had suffered the great wrong which had robbed him of strength and comeliness, and rendered him a marked man among men and an object of pity to women. Once, twice, he raised his head and looked with a darkening face and brooding eyes at the house rising above the trees; and, as he did so, his lips moved with inaudible words.

The clock in the neighboring church tower struck eight; and Wynter roused himself from his reverie, as one by one, from tent and canvas, the little motley crew, ready to transform themselves from clown to king, from dairymaid to princess, at a moment's notice gathered round the flickering flame. The sun had nearly set and its last red rays were reflected on the distant windows of the manor house upon the hill.

"Verner's back, Wynter," said one of men, as he let his pipe. "I suppose we shall have to move on; he hates us strolling players, so they say in the village yonder, and calls us a pack of thieves and beggars."

An indignant murmur ran through the little company.

"He ought not to talk about beggars. He was little more than a beggar himself a couple of years ago," said Wynter, laughing harshly.

"What happened then?" queried one of the others, a man named Hick, who played the hero in the theatre, and the clown when a circus was deemed more profitable.

"His brother, Squire William, as fine a man as ever breathed, died, and left his estate—all the land you can see for miles around—and his young son in trust to Squire Verner, as he calls himself; and a nice squire pale features. He was about eight or nine years old, with a fair, high-bred beauty, that showed him to be no peasant's son. His dark eyes looked out on the strange faces, peering so eagerly into his, with a dauntless courage; and a mass of sunny hair, curling in natural rings, clustered over his forehead.

"Ah!" commented another. "I see! It's a bad lookout for the youngster. Poor little devil!"

As he spoke, there was a sound in the bushes, and Wynter, after listening intently for a moment, sprang up and darted into the brushwood. There was a crackling of dry twigs, a momentary scuffle, and suddenly he reappeared, leading by the hand a little boy.

Waving the others back, Wynter brought his capture into the light of the fire and of the flickering naphtha

"Well, youngster," said Wynter as he relaxed his hold of the child's arm, "what are you doing here, and what's your name?"

"I'm Ernest Verner," was the calm reply, "and I've run away."

There was a murmur of astonishment, at this explicit declaration.

Washington Conference Saves 75 Million Dollars on British Naval Estimates

LONDON, March 17.—Col. Amey, Parliamentary Secretary of the Admiralty, presenting naval estimates to-day said the savings resulting from the Washington Conference would amount to £15,200,000. He said, "we have reached the limit, things have been scrapped to the bone and only further falls in prices or other navies following up a more advanced policy by reduction of armaments can make possible additional economies." Drastic reductions in estimates for air force for coming year were also announced.

Estimates provide for £9,355,500 for normal services and £259,500 for war liabilities, or a reduction of over £6,000,000 as compared with last year.

THE LOAN

It has ever been the way of the present Opposition and their press to underrate the Colony's financial strength and to lend themselves to doubtful methods of injuring our credit abroad. The dastardly attempt of a year ago to convince American financial dastardly attempt of a year ago to convince American financial cy will not soon be forgotten, but bitter and general as was the denunciation of that Judas-like piece of treachery on the part of paid Opposition propagandists, their efforts to undermine the country's stability by the most careless handling of the truth have never ceased for a moment.

Without the slightest compunction, apparently, facts are twisted and distorted to suit their purpose of misrepresentation, nor, indeed, do they hesitate to manufacture lies out of whole cloth when such are necessary. It is interesting to note how absolutely the attempts of these lovers of their country have failed, to bring about the desired result.

The message announcing the taking up of a Newfoundland Government $6,000,000 bond issue, published on Saturday, stated that the price obtained for this loan, carrying five and a half per cent. for twenty years, is 102 3/4. In a recent issue the Toronto Financial Post contained the following statement:

"A five per cent loan would have to sell considerably under par unless it were made a long term issue—five per cent. money for the Dominion does not yet seem in sight."

This statement was made regarding the impending Dominion of Canada ten million dollar loan; and is supplemented by the opinion that victory bonds at 5.52 per cent. must continue to be considered the basis of the market and that prices of other bonds must eventually fall in line with quotations on Victories. It is worth nothing in this connection that the cost of our loan was 5.59 per cent.

The article quoted above has also the following paragraph:

"All is guess work in determining the possible rate of a 'Dominion loan in the fall, but the consensus of market opinion is that a 5 1/4 per cent. 25 year taxable bonds of 'the Dominion would be worth par. But even that forecast strengthening of present prices."

In view of the foregoing, the splendid terms upon which our Government was able to have its loan taken up can have but one significance, namely, that Newfoundland's credit in the money markets has been maintained beyond question by the wise legislation of the past two years—the most trying period in the country's history.

Without anticipating any statement that the Minister of Finance might make with regard to the matter, we have no doubt that the loan was placed out to tender and that the explanation of its having been given to the companies named will prove to be that theirs were "the most advantageous terms in the interests of the country."

BRITISH ELECTIONS

The return of Sir Douglas Newton, Coalition Unionist, in the recent Cambridge bye-election for a successor to Sir Eric Geddes, shows still another important outpost of the Government to have successfully withstood the influence of the recent political events that have produced so many changes in British politics. That the constituency was not wholly untouched, however, is evidenced by the fact that Newton's plurality against a divided opposition was 3,943, whereas that of Sir Eric Geddes in the 1918 election was 7,764.

The result of West Wolverhampton election a couple of weeks ago showed a more substantial victory for the Coalitionists, Sir Robert Bird, son of the late member, having gained his seat with a majority of 2,991 over his labor opponent as against 3,171 majority in the general election. These, with the return of a Government candidate in Inverness, have given the Coalition Unionist Party three successive victories where the reverse would not have been altogether unexpected, so furiously is the political pot boiling in Britain at the present moment.

The recent declaration of Sir Arthur Balfour that he favours a coalition as the government plan to meet existing conditions, follows closely the expressed opinion of Winston Churchill that he "looked forward to the day when, out of the coalition, there shall arise a strong, united and permanent national party." Apparently, it is the view of the men in office that Lloyd George is the only leader and that the only possible chance of continuing in power lies in convincing the country of the desirability of longer continuing the coalition. That is a direct party challenge to those who are seeking, and assiduously working for, the overthrow of Lloyd George.

Lord Shaughnessy Born In Milwaukee

MENTIONED AS FIRST GOVERNOR GENERAL OF IRISH FREE STATE.

Lord Shaughnessy, whose likely appointment as first governor general of the Irish Free State is again rumored in London, is one of the foremost of the railway kings of the Western Hemisphere. For the Canadian Pacific Railway, of which he has long been the head, is not only a complete system of communication between eastern and western parts of the Dominion, but it maintains the British flag in all the seas with its magnificent fleet of steamers. Lord Shaughnessy is of Irish origin, though he was born in Milwaukee, where he attracted the notice of Sir William Van Horne, who took him to Montreal on becoming manager of the Canadian Pacific in 1882. His great services during the world war as head of the supplies, and his giving his son to the cause, made him an object of veneration among a large body of the Irish. Of late years he has been a liberal contributor to the Irish cause. He comes of Tipperary stock and is a staunch Catholic.

Scandal In Ontario House

ALLEGED DISORDERLY CONDUCT IN PARLIAMENT BUILDINGS, TORONTO.

TORONTO, Mar. 8.—Premier Drury declined after the adjournment of the House yesterday to discuss the 'party' issue which was raised in the chamber yesterday, following a notice of motion in Toronto city council calling for an enquiry into alleged disorderly conduct in the parliament buildings on the last night of the 1921 session. It is understood from other sources, however, that the government does not intend to let the matter drop now that public attention has been called to the rumors.

The latest version is that two 'parties' were held in the small hours of the morning and Liberal and U. F. O. private members have been mentioned as involved.

The justification is said to have taken place in a minister's office without his knowledge and in a committee room, and that women were present at least one of the parties. The chief issue raised is that the O. T. A. was violated.

Our New Story

In to-day's issue appears the first installment of a new Advocate serial story, the title of which is "The Lure of Gold" or "The Heart of a Woman." We have time and again been complimented on the excellence of the stories that have been running in this paper, but that which begins today will be found by our readers to be by far the best they have yet read.

The story was written by one of the most famous and popular novelists of the day and is fascinating from the first chapter to the last. We would advise every reader of the Advocate to read "The Lure of Gold" if they would have something exceptional in the way of fiction.

Manitoba Pict Against Labor

SPEECHES WILL NOW BE RECEIVED IN SILENCE BY PARLIAMENT

WINNIPEG, Man.—As a result of the prolonged debate upon the unemployment problem and the innumerable speeches which have been made from the labor benches of the Legislature this session, a movement took definite form among the various groups in the Legislature yesterday to adopt an attitude of "A thunder of silence" towards these members in the future.

This was confirmed by members of the Government, Independent Farmer and Conservative groups. The only members of the House who are not certain in this unwritten pact are included in this unwritten pact are group and Independents, such as Joseph Bernier, member for St. Boniface. The majority of the Conservatives, however, are said to favor expediting the business of the Legislature as much as possible.

In the future, it is said, there will be no prolonged discussions on questions brought before the House by the Labor members, but, following each speech by a Labor member, the House will ask for a vote to be taken.

Members of the House freely confessed yesterday that they had been in a measure responsible for the prolonged debates which have featured the session on matters brought forward by Labor and that the quickest way to reach a decision would be to send them to a vote as quickly as Labor members conclude their speeches. "The policy, it is declared, is not to prejudice such matters before they appear, but to prevent, as far as possible, debates on such subjects as the relative merits of co-operative commonwealths, communal systems of government in contrast to the present system of government and on such issues as production for use and not for profit, the origin of the unemployment problem in the endeavor to convert the Labor representatives.

Perjury Charged

SAN FRANCISCO, March 7.—Indictments charging Mrs. Minnie Neighbors of Los Angeles, and Mrs. Frances S. Bates, formerly of Chicago, with perjury as a result of their testimony at the first manslaughter trial of Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle, had been voted by the grand jury to-day.

Mrs. Neighbors testified she attended Miss Virginia Rappe, whose life Arbuckle was alleged to have taken, while Miss Rappe was supposedly ill at Wheeler Hot Springs, Calif., last August. Evidence designed to show Mrs. Neighbors was not at the Hot Springs was brought before the grand jury by the district attorney. Mrs. Bates testified she had seen Miss Rappe hysterical in a Chicago department store in 1913. The district attorney, through witnesses, told the grand jury Mrs. Bates had not worked in the store after 1910.

With No Arms Or Legs Kept Farm Going

WINNIPEG, March 6.—Despite the loss of his arms and legs, Finlay Booth a pioneer of the early 70's, who died here recently, aged 68, made his own way successfully in farming and other operations for more than fifty years. He was a survivor of a blizzard disaster of the early days of Manitoba, when the wanderer in a storm on the prairies was confronted with conditions that now exist only in comparatively few districts. In those days there were few buildings to offer refuge to the lost person, no fences and the roads were but winding trails.

Mr. Booth arrived in Winnipeg in 1871, and with his father and family, who were taking up land near Carman, Manitoba, started out from the city for the new home late in November. While the others rode in a wagon, young Finlay, who was 15 years old at this time, led the family cow along the trail. After passing what is now the town of Sanford which is part of the famous White Horse plains, a wide and treeless prairie, a storm developed. Finlay's brother, Payton, offered to lead the cow and let Finlay ride, but the latter declined.

The storm later developed in fury and Finlay had to fight against it alone, being separated from the rest of the family. He plodded along, lost and unprotected by the "fierce" blasts. About midnight the storm broke and he trudged eight miles, badly frozen, to the new family home. As a result of his experience his hands and feet had to be amputated, but his rugged constitution pulled him through. With the aid of artificial limbs Mr. Booth developed remarkable expertness in performing work.

Writer Supports Drummers' Tax

St. John's,
March 18, 1922.

The Editor,
The Evening Advocate,
City.

Dear Sir,—For a paper whose keynote has always been "Newfoundland for the Newfoundlanders" I was amazed to see you come out in your issue of Thursday with a criticism of the $50 Commercial Traveller's Tax recently imposed under the new Charter on Canadian, American and other foreign "drummers" coming here to do business.

There are in St. John's a large number of citizens who are trying to make their living by acting as "Manufacturer's Agents" for outside firms. These citizens are for the most part Newfoundlanders born and bred, good citizens who pay taxes and who support everything for the upkeep of the town and the Island, and to whom, undoubtedly, the country owes a living. There is not a "Manufacturer's agent" in St. John's who, if asked, will not tell you that there are very many lines of goods sold in Newfoundland for which the Canadian, American or other foreign manufacturer of same will not appoint a Newfoundland agent, but who covers the local trade by the method of sending down his own "drummer." Why these firms won't appoint local agents the Lord only knows; there are just as good salesmen in Newfoundland as there are in either Canada or the States, but many outside concerns apparently prefer to pay salary, commission, travelling and hotel expenses to their own salesman rather than get the same result by paying a Newfoundland commission only. And, of course, the Newfoundland consumer ultimately pays these extra charges—salary, travelling and hotel expenses in addition to commission—in the additional price added to the cost of the goods whereas if a local man represented the outside firm, commission only would be paid and the price of the goods reduced commensurately.

Firms that won't employ Newfoundlanders to represent them are the firms who send "travellers" here. Should not these firms be taxed indirectly through their travellers? In my opinion, the only mistake made is that the travellers should be taxed a percentage on the amount of the orders they take away from here instead of the measly sum of fifty dollars.

The fact that the "foreign drummer" gets orders and, as any local manufacturer's agent will tell you, bigger orders than the local agent having a similar line and a similar price is ever given is due to two facts: (1) The proverbial hospitality of the Newfoundlander. The Newfoundland buyer does not like to send the outside man away without an order and (2) the fact that the "drummers" themselves are for the most part clean living, pleasant spoken, energetic fellows well versed in the art of salesmanship. I may say right here I have no personal "kick" against the "drummer," himself. He is sent here to get business and in nine times out of ten he gets it, and gets big business. My "kick" is against his firm who prefers to charge his Newfoundland customer the extra expense of sending him here rather than save the Newfoundland consumer money by giving the Newfoundland manufacturer's agent a chance to earn a dollar. I also criticize some—not all—of the Newfoundland buyers who give the outside salesman orders when they can get similar goods at the same (or a lower) price through the Newfoundland manufacturer's agent. These buyers do not seem to realize that very often the Newfoundland agent is a retail customer of theirs whereas the outside "drummer" spends nothing at their store.

Your article makes a great deal of what these outside men spend here. I admit they are obliged to pay their railway fare and their hotel bill. Most of them also take a cab from and to the station on arrival and departure, respectively. I very strongly question if nine out of ten of them spend another twenty dollar bill in the city unless it is in the game of poker or "rummy" at the hotel. I have known one of these men kick like a steer at paying a dollar and a half per day for a sample room and it is perfectly obvious that the article in your issue of Friday was inspired by one of these drummers who objects to spending a cent more in St. John's than he can possibly avoid.

H. T. JAFFRAY

Mr. Jaffray, new Assistant General Manager of Imperial Bank of Canada, Western Superintendant.

In conclusion, Mr. Editor, I can definitely say that if every outside firm selling goods in Newfoundland was compelled to appoint a local agent, not only would the local manufacturer's agents have business that would give them more than a bare living, but there would be many good openings for other Newfoundlanders who do not know at present where their next cent is coming from. If the "Traveller's Tax" compels outside firms selling goods in Newfoundland to appoint Newfoundland agents it will be a much greater benefit to the community than that conferred by the actual amount of extra revenue received from the tax by the city.

Thanking you for space,

Yours very truly,
"One Who Has Studied the Question."

(Our correspondent has not noticed that the article he refers to was written as the communicated opinion of others, and not from the standpoint of the considered opinion of the Advocate. Ed.)

Mind Your P's and Q's

Pertinent Points About Pen-Pushing. Handwriting and health are closely associated, and a study of your signature may easily result in your saving a doctor's bill.

It is not possible to diagnose disease from handwriting, but it is possible to state from a person's handwriting whether he is fit or otherwise.

A case is known in which a man had signed a document during an illness, and a copy of it some weeks later, when he had recovered. Several months afterwards the two documents figured in the courts, it being contended by one side in the case that the second signature was a forgery, a theory which, however, I, as a handwriting expert, was able to disprove.

The study of handwriting is more fascinating than many people realize.

Your Two Different Styles. Do you know that you cannot write better than yourself? By this I mean that no matter how hard you try to exclude it, something of your personality must be reflected in your writing, so that it will differ from any other.

Another little-known fact is that some peculiarities of handwriting are inherited from our ancestors. I have often examined old documents and letters written by the forebears of people now living, and have noted little twists and mannerisms that are still unconsciously reproduced by their living representatives.

Still less known is the fact that many people possess the power of writing in two entirely different styles, a gift for which no one has yet been able to account.

One man I know writes business letters in a rapid hand, with a decided leaning to the right. His private letters are written in a style which the average man or woman would at once declare was that of quite another person. He himself is unable to explain the difference; the two styles come as naturally to him as one does to most of us.

NEW YORK PRESS HIT BY STRIKE

Reduced Morning Papers Promised With Aid of Emergency Pressmen

DISPUTE ON TIME

Under Arbitral Decision, Overtime Pay Would Be Eliminated

NEW YORK, March 1.—Union pressmen in all New York morning newspaper press rooms abandoned their posts last night, according to an announcement by the Publishers' Association of New York City. Immediately following the announcement the publishers gave out the following statement:

"The publishers reduced their papers to eight pages and the prospects were that all papers would be issued on time by a force of emergency pressmen hastily gathered by the newspaper owners.

"The action of the union pressmen was due to dissatisfaction with an arbitration decision made by Judge Martin T. Mantz of the United States Court of Appeals on February 22.

"The arbitration fixed $51 and $45 weekly as pay for day pressmen-in-charge and journeymen respectively, and $54 and $48 weekly for each night pressman-in-charge and journeyman pressman. These are the highest wages paid such men in the country, but the arbitrator abolished various union practices by which wages were artificially increased far above the basic scale.

"Before beginning the arbitration under conditions proposed by the union itself, both sides signed an agreement to abide by the judge's decision. By repudiating the decision and breaking their contract the union terminates relations with New York newspapers which have continued without a break for over thirty years.

"The publishers in a statement signed by all the seventeen newspaper owners publicly announced that they would carry out the arbitration award whether favorable or unfavorable and that if the local and international pressmen's union, both of which claimed the agreement to arbitrate all differences, now repudiate the decision the newspaper owners would not again make a contract with the pressmen's union.

"All other unions in New York newspapers are standing by the publishers."

FIRST EDITIONS NOT OUT.

Early in the evening a majority of the 2,100 members of the union organization met at Yorkville Casino to decide on acceptance or rejection of the arbitral decision. The leaders announced that action was expected either one way or the other before 3.30 but that hour passed without any further announcement coming from the locked doors of the hall to which reporters were denied admittance. This was the situation at midnight. First editions of the morning papers had failed to appear.

In the discussions, it was reported, union leaders were urging the men to authorize appointment of a committee to continue negotiations. The dispute between publishers and employees has centred about clauses in the arbitral decision providing that a work day should consist of eight hours, whether at day or night time, which automatically would have eliminated overtime pay now collected. It provided that overtime pay should apply only on time actually worked. Another subject of contention was the stipulation that the publishers should have the sole right to determine the number of men necessary to operate the presses. In the past the union designated the number of men to be employed.

Long after its usual hour of publication, the New York Herald issued an eight page paper captioned "Strike edition." An 8 column announcement on the front page explained that press room forces were "on strike" and that the press room was temporarily crippled.

Shipwrecked Crew Arrives

Captain H. Penny, H. Kingdale, Cook, A. Simms, Boston, M. Penny, J. Sutton and E. A. Penny of the wrecked schooner Norma B. Strong arrived by the Rosalind last evening.

Early in January the Strong was on the homeward journey and reached within 20 miles of Cape Race, but met with adverse weather and was blown back over the ocean. Terrible weather and heavy seas were encountered which forced the crew to abandon their ship and take to the boats. At about 4 o'clock one day they put off in the vessel's motor boat and arrived at Fayaal about noon of the following day. From Fayaal they came via Liverpool to New York by the S. S. Arabia and thence home by the Rosalind.

Hotel and Store Are Burned

A message was received in town yesterday from Port Blandford, stating that the hotel and store owned by Mr. S. R. Oakley, and now under the management of Mr. J. R. Courage, had been totally destroyed by fire. The blaze was very spectacular and the countryside was brightly illuminated for miles around.

All the residents turned out but their efforts proved unavailing and the splendid hotel and store adjoining, were razed to the ground. It has not been ascertained if there was any insurance.

Accidental Shooting

An accident with a very sad ending occurred on Tuesday at noon by which Mr. George Sheppard, of Ship Head, came to his death. Mr. Sheppard and his son had been in the woods for firewood, and just at the taking of Long Pond, at the end of Shaumarue's Hill the slide overturned and fell on the man.

The son was driving, and his father was on the slide to keep up the load should it topple over. The son managed to get the load off his father, and hurriedly got him home.

The cause of the upsetting of the load is said that the slide came to a gulch, and what is called "splitting the gulch" (that is guiding one runner of the slide to the high side of it and the other to the edge of the gulch,) the deceased being on the gulch side, the load fell over striking the man and pinning him to the ice. The "squeezing" of the load struck him on the head, and really killed him. There was no other injury except that to the head. A few minutes work by those who used the path would have levelled the dumps of the gulch, and made it safe for all.

Medical aid was had, but the injuries were fatal, the head being badly crushed. The helplessness lingered till 7 o'clock in the evening, when death brought the end. The deceased was 49 years of age.

Besides the widow, two daughters and three sons are left to mourn the death of the head of the family, namely, Elsie and Marjorie, and Ronald, William and Leonard. Three brothers, Simeon T., Stephen, and Ebenezer, live here, and one sister, Mrs. J. J. Barnett, of Boston.

Mr. Sheppard carried on a fishery business at Seal Islands, Labrador, and was a successful man at that industry.

He was an industrious man, a good neighbor and bore the reputation of an upright, conscientious man. The funeral took place this afternoon interment being at the C. of E. Cemetery, Rev. W. E. K. Cracknell conducting the service—Mr. Grace Standard.

Man Is Killed By Overturned Slide

William Power, of Brigus, entered hospital last night to be treated for a badly lacerated arm. He was rabbit shooting when his gun exploded and the load entered his arm. It is not known if the arm will have to be amputated.

St. Patrick's Day At Bell Island

BELL ISLAND, March 18.—St. Patrick's Day was one to be remembered for some time on Bell Island. The Star of the Sea Association in full body paraded to St. Michael's Church. High Mass was sung by the Pastor, Rev. J. J. McGrath. The music of the choir was suitable to the Feast Day.

The sermon of the occasion was preached by Rev. J. J. Kennedy. In beautiful diction the glorious past of Ireland's history was portrayed and with glowing eloquence he dwelt upon St. Patrick's heritage to the Irish people and their descendants through the globe to hand down to future generations. The priceless gift of faith unsullied and undiminished should be the constant endeavour of St. Patrick's followers. The Society called at the Presbytery and paid their respects to Rev. Fathers McGrath, Rawlins and Kennedy.

The Irish night in the Star of the Sea Hall was very enjoyable. The best talent of the place in music, vocal and instrumental was in evidence. Great credit is due the organizers, Mrs. B. English had charge of the entertainment. A dramatic sketch of Irish character was staged by Captain Leo Murphy and others which was a special feature of the evening. On the whole the performance was very refined in taste and was appreciated by a full capacity house.

Rosalind In Port

The Red Cross liner Rosalind, Capt. Mitchell, 53 hours from Halifax, docked at 7 o'clock last night. Capt. Mitchell reported a very good trip down except that considerable ice was met and the steamer was obliged to go over 100 miles out of her ordinary track in order to avoid the floes as far as possible. Saturday's southwest wind loosened the ice up and the Rosalind had little difficulty in making the Cape yesterday afternoon, and although the ice was close in shore made a good run down.

Capt. Mitchell saw no shipping along the coast and is of the opinion that vessels making the coast will have a hard time reaching the land as the ice is very heavy and in large pans. The Rosalind brought a large inward freight and the following passengers: Mrs. May Stick, J. W. McGrath, Mrs. N. Penney, Isaac Lewis, Wm. Drover, D. Summers, Mrs. B. Clark, H. H. Ross, Wm. Way, D. Oliphant, Miss B. Caul, R. J. Korner, Mrs. R. Korner, W. J. Parsons, Mrs. W. Parsons, P. Daniels, Rev. Fr. Williams, Mr. Williams, L. McGregor, G. S. Doyle and 12 second class. The Rosalind will likely get away for Halifax and New York to-morrow night.

Vesuvius In Eruption

Phenomenon Began With Two Earthquake Shocks.

Naples, March 5.—Vesuvius is again in eruption. The phenomenon began with two mild shocks of earthquakes, which were followed by the collapse of the eruption cone, 200 feet high, which stood inside the crater.

The fall of the cone was accompanied by rumblings and explosions and the throwing out of ashes and incandescent stones. Liquid lava poured out from the crater in streams and in the 24 hours since the disturbance began it covers an area of 100,000 square feet.

The lava has formed round the crater an incandescent band more than 300 feet wide. The temperature of this molten mass is 2,000 degrees Fahrenheit. The width of the crater is now 1,500 feet.
